As a result, many parents are forced to seek additional help to monitor their children while they are at work.

6. Day Care Centre: The majority of homes in today's culture have a family dynamic in which both parents must work. It is practically hard for most Indian households to make ends meet without two sources of income. As a result, many parents are forced to seek additional help to monitor their children while they are at work. "These days, couples must negotiate complicated issues such as job, family, child care, and housework. It becomes clear that, although traditional marriage has been a relationship built on mutual reliance for ages, modern marriage is not. Our
